Agenda Overview

In a bid to overcome challenges posed by cyber security threats and data breaches - both of which are increasing in frequency - as well as build resiliency and transparency, the Australian Public Sector has seen a number of new recommendations to governance and risk management guidelines and ISO31000 standards.

These recommendations encourage organisations to rethink and redesign governance, risk and compliance frameworks and to embed these at all levels.

Achieving this is often a complex process however that requires a reassessment and appraisal of current and future operating processes as well as a cultural transformation to help educate and bring the entire organisation on board.

To help you on this journey we've put together the Public Sector Network's Public Sector Governance, Risk and Compliance virtual event, which brings together a broad group of government governance experts to help you redesign ERM frameworks, increase resiliency, transform risk culture and drive improved outcomes for citizens.
